

THROUGH THE TEACHERS' EYES

All teachers (100%) agreed that their students learned new things about Egypt as outcomes of participation of iEARN.

Examples:

- Important events through stamp collection
- Information on the pollution in Helwan
- Visiting the historic places and collecting data about Egyptian history
- Certain diseases and how to cure them
- The impact of violence on females
- How mothers with disabled children suffer
- The importance of literacy for mothers
- Important Egyptian leaders such as Nabaweih Moussa
- Street kids and how they live
- Assessing pollution in Alexandria
- Assessing the increased violence in schools among students
- The importance of water for Egypt
- The monuments of Alex
- How to protect water resources
- The history of Egypt from 1918 to 1981
- How to protect Egyptian monuments
- The relationship between overpopulation and economic problems
- Characters like Omar Ibn Khattab, Omar Ibn Abdel Aziz, Kautbai, etc.
- Learning about others countries like USA, China and Iraq

THROUGH THE STUDENTS' EYES

Most students (90.4%) agreed that they learned new things about Egypt as outcomes of participation of iEARN.

Examples:

- Many historical events that I didn't learn about at school
- My country is beautiful and my duty is to keep it so
- A lot of information about Egyptian civilization and monuments
- A lot about my governorate and my role in protecting the environment
- Education in Egypt past and present
- Women in Egypt past and present
- Egypt is participating in several projects and has a role in solving environmental problems
- Identifying the problems that Egypt is facing
- New places and other governorates in Egypt
- I have now an unshakable belief in the greatness of our people
- Great characters/scientists/leaders that served Egypt through (my hero)
- Problems of water and air pollution
- Laws of environment
- Alexandria library, the Romanian museum
- Several NGOs
- Attended conferences in several places in Egypt that I never visited before
- Through my project "children and violence", I visited a Reformatory for the first time in my life. I listened to the children's stories which added a lot to me.
- Great Egyptian women who did wonderful things for this country.